GI Security sponsors corporate India's security summit, Secpro 2011

Chairman, Mr. Ashit Luthra presenting at Secpro 2011

Every year, Secpro (Security Professionals' Forum) is built around different themes. The objective of the third edition of Secpro was to focus on the future threats in the corporate sector and GI Security was one of the sponsors in Bangalore.

Mr. Ashit Mohan Luthra, the Chairman of GI Security, made a presentation on how security training can make a difference. He used this opportunity to drive home the importance of training security guards according to the PSAR Act 2005 guidelines. He also stressed on the importance of complying with all statutory and legal obligations.

The Summit was spread over two days 17th-18th of March, 2011. The conference schedule included keynote addresses and case study sessions which ran in to pre-scheduled business meetings. Leading industry experts addressed the latest topics and challenges facing the industry.

Those attending the summit had the opportunity to network with security professionals and officials from around the world. They received the latest information on key security issues affecting corporate India. It also provided a platform to compare innovative technologies, products and services first hand.
